Centralia School District Moves Forward Following Levy Failure

By Emily Fitzgerald

The Centralia School District has been in a difficult position since the end of April, when its replacement levy proposal failed at the ballot box for the second time. With no option to try again before the district's existing levy expires in December, the district must make $4.2 million in cuts to balance the budget for the upcoming school year.

"We're figuring it out. We have a great team working really hard on it. At the same time, it's obviously a challenge and a weight," said Centralia School District Superintendent Dr. Lisa

This isn't a new position for the Centralia School District, as it operated without levy dollars between December 2020 and the 2022 levy collection cycle.

Grant remembers that time well, starting at the Centralia School District in July 2020, while the district was facing a $11.8 million deficit and the challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Hard work and collaboration between Centralia teachers, staff, the school board and the community brought the district

through that time, Grant said, and the district is in a much better place now to deal with the struggle of a levy failure.

"We are determined to continue to move forward. Does it make that harder? Yes," Grant said.

Everything in the levy was something the district believed was necessary "to help us serve students and achieve our goals for students," Grant said, so district staff are figuring out how to mitigate negative impacts of the budget cuts.

"It is heavy to discuss what we think should be on a reduction list. All of them make me sick to my stomach," Grant said.

It would be easier for the district to cut the whole list, Grant said, "but that has a ripple effect of other things that cause more issues, more loss of revenue ... so it's trying to find the right path when you feel there isn't a good answer."

While the levy failure is frustrating, Grant said, "it's not that we don't completely understand. I mean, we took very seriously what we were asking for ... and yet at the same time, we understand the burden on taxpayers with that increase in assessed (property) value."

While the district did not pass its levy this year, a valuable "core of support" including the Centralia Downtown Association, the Port of Centralia, Centralia City Council, the Lewis County Board of Commissioners and other county and state organizations, has developed around the district.

"We really believe that we're stronger as a district that contributes to business strength and economic strength and vice versa," Grant said.

The Centralia School District is seeking to partner with new businesses in the area, with the goal of letting businesses know the district has an educational offering for their employees' families and is producing citizens and workers that meet businesses' needs and businesses would want to hire.

"If there's a way to do that or if they want to do that, they just need to reach out," Grant said.

Addressing Our Workforce Needs

By Peter Abbarno

20th District Rep. R-Centralia

Every legislative session there are a handful of bills that monopolize the headlines throughout the state. For many parents with children in school, workers seeking opportunities, and employers wanting to expand and improve their businesses, workforce development is on the top of their list of issues. Whether directly related to your business, or not, workforce development in critical areas is essential to the success of a community.

What about all the legislation that impacts workforce development?

Bipartisan House Bill 1013 directs the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI) and the educational service districts (ESDs) to establish the Regional Apprenticeship Preparation Pilot Program. The stated purpose of the program is to identify common best practices and processes for establishing regional apprenticeship preparation programs that support postsecondary success for students and strengthen community engagement in schools and school districts.

Senate Bill 5499, which recognizes the critical shortage of nurses in the State of Washington and makes it easier for nurses licensed in other states to get licensed in Washington. This bill enacts the Interstate Nurse Licensure Compact in order to reduce bureaucratic barriers and more efficiently license nurses from other states.

Senate Bill 5582 reduces the barriers and expands educational opportunities to increase the supply of nurses in Washington by allowing nursing directors with a graduate degree to run Bachelor of Science Nursing programs and allowing for one hour of high-quality simulation to count as two hours of clinical site placement.

House Bill 1724 reduces requirements for licensure or certification for certain behavioral health professionals. Washingtonians, especially in rural communities, are struggling for access to behavioral health services. This new law helps address pregraduation experience, training, and credentialling.

Senate Bill 5499 eliminates College in the High School fees and meets students where they are in the high school for more accessible dual credit opportunities.

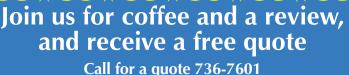

House Bill 1694 addresses the home care workforce shortages by expanding timelines for long-term care workers seeking certification as a home care aide, increasing the list of family members who are exempt from having to become home care aides and reduces the training requirements for these caregivers, and exempts certain home care aides and nursing assistants whose licensing credentials have expired from paying late fees or renewal fees.

In addition to policy changes, the Legislature passed budgets that directly invest in workforce development. On the House Capital Budget Committee, where I serve as the Ranking Republican member, we crafted a capital budget that includes:

- Over $600 million in investments for school construction assistance, modernization grants, school seismic safety grants, and financial assistance to help create a safe environment for our students that is conducive to successful learning;
- Over $400 million for maintenance and construction projects within our community and technical college system; and
- Over $70 million for early learning facilities to help create safe learning spaces for children while their parents seek economic and educational opportunities.

We must continue to support workforce development, especially in rural and high-need areas. Workforce development includes students in high school; the community and technical college system; adult learners; apprenticeships; and individuals pursuing second careers. I am proud of the bipartisan support and work in the Legislature to identify and address some of the workforce needs today, and in the future, but there is much work ahead of us.

Rep. Peter Abbarno is a represents the 20th Legislative District and is an attorney with Althauser Rayan Abbarno, LLP. The June Chamber "Business After Hours" event will be on Thursday, June 15, from 5:00pm to 7:00pm at the law office of Althauser Rayan Abbarno, LLP on West Magnolia in Centralia.

CHAMBER MEMBERS FEATURED THIS MONTH

This month the Chamber is featuring a variety of education options available in our communities including Centralia School District (page 1), Centralia Christian School, Centralia College and its health programs, and Washington Trucking School. We wanted to illustrate the breadth and depth of opportunities right here in Lewis County whether it's our public schools, private education, college, or the trades.

Centralia Christian School Offers Church-Based Private School Education

By Emily Fitzgerald

Some churches have the capacity to set up their own schools for the children of its congregation, but in Lewis County, those church-based schools are few and far between.

Lewis County Adventist School and St. Joseph's Catholic School are examples of successful Christian schools in the area, alongside Centralia Christian School, which serves families of any Christian denomination.

"We want to be available to the Christian community who want a certain kind of education," Principal Peter Larson said.

With the motto "Pursuing Christ in character, academics and service," Centralia Christian School is a private school in Centralia.

The success of Centralia Community College's Running Start Program means Centralia Christian School can rely on them to support 11th and 12th grade students, while Centralia Christian School can focus on providing the best program possible for kids 10th grade and below.

"Our goal is to have a really excellent program for preschool through 10th grade," Larson said.

When asked what he would tell parents who are considering Centralia Christian School over a public school program, Larson said, "We're not here necessarily for you to escape something else, we're here for you to pursue something that's important to you. And if it's important to you, we'll partner with you."

He added, "We want to serve the church, all of the different Christian denominations in Lewis County."

For more information on Centralia Christian School, visit https://www. centraliachristianschool.org/.

Centralia College Offers Wide Variety of Healthcare Pathways

By Emily Fitzgerald

Healthcare encompasses a wide variety of jobs that each require different skills and certifications, but whatever healthcare job a student is interested in, Centralia College likely has a program to accommodate them.

"We have so many programs," said Elizabeth Lazo, Centralia College's career and technical education dean of instruction.

Many programs, such as the college's nursing assistant certification, emergency medical technician, phlebotomy and medical assistant programs, end with students receiving their respective certificates as part of the class.

"All of these you'd be certified afterward, as long as you pass your clinicals and classes and whatnot," Lazo said.

Centralia College's Nursing Assistant Certified (NAC) program in particular is "stellar," Lazo said.

"NAC courses ran throughout COVID and continued to graduate students that are currently employed and have pursued their next step in their healthcare career," Lazo said.

Other Centralia College healthcare programs, such as the associates of applied sciences transfer, allow students to complete part of associate's or bachelor's degrees.

Centralia College recently began offering an associate's degree in substance use disorder professionals, which will graduate its first cohort of 15 this June.

Many of Centralia College's healthcare graduates stay in the area to fill muchneeded positions.

"Our students are highly employable," Lazo said.

That high-employability has fostered community partnerships, giving students more opportunities to practice their skills within the community.

"Those partnerships have different clinical opportunities that happened and different internship opportunities, which is really cool," Lazo said.

Washington Trucking School Supports Chehalis Students Working Towards Their CDLs

By Emily Fitzgerald

Washington Trucking School's Chehalis location has been consistently busy since it opened in March 2022.

Like the original branch in Olympia, the school's Chehalis branch helps aspiring commercial drivers obtain their commercial driver's license (CDL) and any additional endorsements they need for their next job.

"We try to do everything under the sun when it comes to endorsements," said assistant manager James Fasano.

The school also offers professional retraining programs for drivers who have experience but have been out of the field for a while, as well as manual restriction removal training for drivers who received a certification limiting them to driving automatic transmission vehicles.

Washington Trucking School can train those drivers on manual vehicles to remove that restriction, which "really opens up the job opportunities and really expands how much you can make," Fasano said.

Classes start every two weeks with about four students per class. Most of the Chehalis students have jobs lined up before they get their CDL, but students can enroll independently and have the school help facilitate meetings

"We have a group of businesses that we send people to that we know are going to treat them right," Fasano said, adding,"Generally, when they have a paper CDL in hand, they're starting within a week."

Blue Skies Drones

Drones have become a popular tool for security and surveillance in recent years. They offer several advantages over traditional security methods, such as providing a bird's eye view of a location, accessing hard-to-reach areas, and covering a large area quickly and efficiently. Drones equipped with high-resolution cameras, infrared sensors, and other advanced technology can capture footage of suspicious activities, monitor crowds, and identify potential security threats.

In addition to surveillance, drones can also be used for other security purposes, such as delivering emergency supplies to inaccessible areas, conducting search and rescue operations, and inspecting infrastructure for damage or vulnerabilities.

However, the use of drones for security also raises concerns about privacy and civil liberties. Proper regulations and ethical guidelines should be in place to ensure that drone surveillance is used appropriately and with respect for individual rights.

Overall, drones can be a valuable tool for enhancing security measures, but their use should be balanced with considerations for privacy and ethical concerns. www.blueskiesdronerental.com

Be A Chamber Champion! Volunteers Sought

The Chamber is kicking off its Champion Volunteer program with pizza and an Open House on Wednesday, June 14, from 11 am to 1 pm. There are several events The Chamber needs volunteer assistance with and those interested in signing up or learning more can stop by and enjoy a quick lunch while meeting the staff. The Chamber is located at 500 NW Chamber of Commerce Way in Chehalis (10-5 exit 79).

The three upcoming events that need Champion Volunteers are the mid-way stop at Penny Park in Chehalis for the Seattle-To-Portland ride on July 15; the inaugural 3-on-3 Streetball Festival taking place August 5 and 6 in downtown Chehalis; and the annual Sausage Fest and Cornhole tournament at Dick's Brewing in Centralia on September 9.

'It takes a real champion to volunteer, and we appreciate each and every individual who helps make these events a success," noted The Chamber Director, Cynthia Mudge. She added that, "There is no set agenda for the Open House. Just stop by for as little or long as you like, enjoy a slice of pizza, and see if becoming a volunteer works for you!"
